FIGHTING WITH AN ICE PICK

A COLORED BOY IN FRENCH'S HOTEL USES AN UGLY WEAPON.

In a Struggle With Patrick McLaughlin and William Buddulph He Drives His Pick into Biddulph's Head Just Above the Ear A Serious Affray Over a Trivial Occurrence-Biddulph in Hospital.

Ascore of people in French's Hotel barroom this morning were excited but neutral onlookers at a determined struggle between a colored man armed with an ice-pick and two others, one of whom was Cashier Patrick McLaughlin. Soon after 10 o'clock several of the guests woke up thirsty and called for ice-water. Dallas Holland, the colored boy stationed in the third floor hall, was sent down for ice. According to standing orders he ought to have gone into the cellar for it, but to save trouble he chose to get it from the barroom. A pailful of broken ice stood behind the bar, and without asking any one's permission Holland began helping himself. Cashier McLaughlin caught him in the act and shouted to the boy to keep his hands off. "You can't bluff me," was the colored an's retort. "I shall get ice here, or where man's retort. "I shall get ice here, or where I please."

The cashier thereupon took hold of Holland and tried to push him away from the bar. The colored boy's blood was up, however, and he fought desperately, changing his ice-pick from one hand to another and dealing vicious blows right and left.

William Biddulph, another waiter, came to Mr. McLaughlin's assistance, and both did their best to rush Holland out of the barroom, Holland, however, had got a tight grip on the bar-rail and fought like a tiger.

Suddenly he released his hold and rushed at Biddulph, driving him to the ground. The ugly ice pick entered the man's head just above the ear, drawing a lot of blood.

It was not until then that any of the bystanders interfered. They laid hold of the infuriated boy and brought in Detective Mullin, of the Oak street squad, who took Holland to the station-house.

Biddulph was removed to the Chambers Street Hospital. The doctors found that the ice-pick had just missed a vital spot. His injury is not serious.

ANOTHER BURGLAR COMMITS MURDER. An Illinois Farmer Killed While His Family

ISPECIAL TO THE WORLD.!

MORRISON, III., Feb. 18. —Early yesterday morning Mrs. Guthrie and other members of the family of George N. Guthrie went to church, leaving Mr. Guthrie at home. When they returned the daughter found her father lying on the floor with his clothes saturated with blood from a wound in his breast. It was first suspected that Mr. Guthrie had committed suicide, until Mrs. Guthrie discovered that a safe in which valuables are kept-and at that a safe in which valuables are kept—and at times large sums of money—had been tampered with, but had resisted the attempts of the burglars. The dead man was lying on the floor, his pockets rifled of $85 and a gold watch and chain. From this fact it is presumed that he heard a noise and went into the room and was shot through the heart. The room indicated a struggle, and it is probable that the burglar did not are until he saw that he was combelled to or submit to being captured. The compelled to or submit to being captured. The general opinion is that the murder was committed by some tramp.

The murdered man was about forty-four years of age, a very wealthy farmer and highly respected in St. Clair County.

Turned Out of Doors by His Son-

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 13 -- A rather remarkable story of filial ingratitude was brought out this morning in the District Court. William Meylers morning in the District Court. William Meylers owned a homestead, of which his younger son, William, wished to get possession. Meylers said he would will the property to him, but this did not satisfy the son. Finally the old people were induced to part with their property in consideration of an agreement according to which the son was to take care of the old people and their blind daughter as long as they lived. This agreement was made in December, 1884. Some time after that Mrs. Meylers, the mother, died. Now the son has turned the father out of doors and refuses longer to provide for him.

Mrs. Rawson's Son Sentenced.

[SPECIAL TO THE WORLD.] CERCACO, Feb. 13.—Ralph Lee, son of Mrs. S. W. Rawson, who shot his millionaire stepfather as he was emerging from a church, was to-day entenced to eighteen months in jail. The only sentenced to eighteen months in jail. The only question at the trial pertained to his age. It was finally decided that the would-be assaeshi was under eighteen years, therefore he could not be sent to the penitentiary. Eighteen months in jail was the limit of the law. The trial of Mrs. Rawson on the charge of instigating her son to kill his stepfather will prohably not come up before next week. The divorce suit is set for to-morrow, but Mr. Rawson's counsel will strive for a pestponement on the ground that he is physically undue to come isto court because of late threes, growing out of his stepson's attempted assassination of him.

LIEUT. BETTINI MARRIED. He Weds Miss Dalsy Abbott, a New York

Heiress, This Merning. After five years of unavailing grief for who could never be his Lieut. Giannini Bettini to-day surprises his friends and the fashionable world in general by marrying a beautiful New York heiress. The last time that Lieut, Bettini's name was prominently mentioned he was almost at the point of death in St. Luke's Hospital suffering from three bullet wounds inflicted by himself because fair Mim Lilian Ayer, daughter self because fair Miss Lilian Ayer, daughter of Mrs. Josephine Ayer, had refused to listen to his suit. That was in May, 1883. At noon to-day the lieutenant stood up before Fathe Thomas J. Ducey, in the parlor of Mrs. William L. Pomeroy, at 27 West Thirty-ninth street, and married Mrs. Pomeroy's daughter, Miss Daisy Abbott.

The parlor was beautified and perfumed by the presence of a profusion of Marchal Niel and Gloire de Dijon roses. The couple stood between two white satin-covered pillars which supported a heavy silken cord.

The bride, a petite and pretty brunette, was dressed in a short gown of white mousseline de soie, with a tulle veil and wreath of orange blossoms.

The groom, who is a tall, erect and dark-complexioned man twenty-eight years of age, wore the undress uniform of his Italian regiment, the Third Savoy Cavalry. His best man was Mons. A. Monico, the Italian Vice-Consul.

The bridesmaids were Miss Edna Hall, Miss Williamson and Miss Prime. The wedding party, which was small and select, included Mr. and Mrs. Charles Coudert, the Rev. Dr. Wendell Prime, Mr. and Mrs. Hildreth K. Bloodgood, Mr. William A. Lawson, Mr. and Mrs. Oharles Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. John Bloodgood, Mrs. William A. Lottimer, Mr. and Mrs. Barclay, Mrs. James Cooper, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Williamson, Mr. Tuckerman, Mr. Fred Dromer and Mr. William L. Pomerov, stepfather of the bride.

After the ceremony the happy couple, under a shower of rice, got into carriages and were drawn to the station on their way to Florida. They will spend their honeymoon in the South. The Lieutenant has not yet decided whether he will retain his rank in the Italian army or even whether he will return to his native land.

Lieut. Bettini first came to America on attaining his majority seven years ago. Being a member of one of the most prominent Piednontese families, he was admitted into the best society. He became an ardent suitor for the hand of Miss Lillian Ayer, and when she refused him he shot himself on the stoop of her home. Miss Ayer afterwards married Commander Pearson, of the United States Army.

Of the workmen who fell with the engine and girders, and of those who were under the structure, two were killed and others hurt. Eye-witnesses of the accident seem to have been few, but there are plenty who were near at hand, and these all declare that from what they saw the section must have fallen

The facts that the driver of the street-car saw it falling, and that the engine's runs lie eastward of where it was stationed, and with its top towards the east, indicates rather that the eastern ends of the girders began to fall first. The pieces all fell into the street and touched no buildings.

As soon as the accident occurred a firealarm was rung, a police patrol alarm was sounded and all the available ambulances were summoned. The scene of trouble was roped in and workmen and firemen went to work to clear away the debris.

The number of the killed was at first reported as high as fourteen, but this proved to be a great exaggoration.

Great crowds soon reached the point where Great crowds soon reached the point where the section fell, and, not without occasional apprehensive glances at other sections over their heads, stood around to await developments, only those next to the ropes being able to see anything.

Explanations of the accident are thus far very vague.

"It just come down," was the usual reply to questions put in the crowd.

Changes in the weather and the effect on the iron of the structure make the points of the favorite theories in explanation of the disaster. The ends of the girders as they lie are intact, and the thought that they pulled out is naturally suggested in looking at them.

out is naturally suggested in looking at them.

The derricks stood on the end of the next section west and did not fall.

Then if, as the circumstances indicate, the east ends of the girders started away, first, it is suggested that, the action of the cold weather having loosened the hold of the girders at that end, the combined weight of the derricks and engine and the force of their action may have pulled the girders away from the space and let them fall. This could easily be the case, as the strain would have fallen chiefly away from the east span and upon the west span of the section.

Miss Hewitt fel: convinced that there was plenty of musical taleut amour New York society girls, which, if brought together and properly trained and directed, would reach as creditable results as those achieved by its London prototype, and the success of the undertaking, up to the present time, has justified this belief. When rehearsals mist began there were about twesty members of the orchestra. Owing to the fact of the violondello being an instrument rarely adopted by amateurs, it was necessary for a time to engage the services of a violonecilist and also a first violin to secure an even performance; but outside aid was very soon dispensed with. Four large iron girders, comprising one section of the road, fell at a point almost at the head of Fayette street.

The section which fell was the one where was stationed the lifting engine by which the derricks were worked. The derricks themselves were on the next section. The engine fell with the girders and added to the wreek which then cumbered the street.

None but workmen happened to be about the spot where the fall occurred, at the time, but a Reid avenue street car reached the point just in time to have its front portion struck and crushed by the end of one of the girders.

The driver got a glimpse of the falling mass and sprang from the platform in the endeavor to get beyond resoh. He was unsuccessful, however, and two feet from what would have been the safety line he was crushed beneath the iron. One of the horses drawing the car was also killed outright.

Michael Clark, Secretary of the Anti-Poverty Society, said: "As an incident of the trouble, Mr. Croasdale, during my absence, opened my private desk and took therefrom a list of the names of the members of the Executive Committee, with the intention of whipping up his friends for last night's meeting. Dr. McGlynn acted under by-law 8, which gives him power to appoint members of the committee.

"The seceders did all the packing, members appearing last night who had not been here before since the October election. The matter will lead to the removal of men who can take no following with them. The society will go on just the same."

John J. Bealin, a prominent leader in the United Labor party, said: "It certainly sottles this fact—that the Labor party will not be a factor in the re-election of Cleveland, no matter what platform he may stand on.

"The Labor party stands on the Syraeuse platform, and in accordance with it a national conference will be held and candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States will be nominated. ROWELL FOR A RACE

Anxious for a Test Either in London or New York.

If the Trial Takes Place in England He Will Allow the Philadelphian $500 for Expenses, and He Wants the Same Allowance if the Race is Made Here-Waiting for an Answer-In Good Condition and Confident of Success.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—Charles Rowell told THE EVENING WORLD correspondent this morning that he was very much in earnest in challenging Albert, who has just broken the six days' go-as-you-please record in New Rowell is much stouter than when he left

New York the last time, but says he is confident that he can do better work there than he did before, and that he can best Albert's record. He will race for £500 a side, but will double the amount if desired. Rowell prefers the race to take place in Agricultural Hall here, and will allow Albert

£100 for expenses. If he goes to New York

he wants the same allowance for expenses "If these terms do not suit Albert," said Rowell, "I will enter a £100 sweepstakes, the gate receipts to be divided as in the Astley belt contests. I expect to hear from New York to-morrow, and am ready to begin train-
